WHAT IS QUESTBRIDGE?

About QuestBridge

Founded in 1994, QuestBridge is a national nonprofit based in Palo Alto, California that connects the nation's most exceptional, low-income youth with leading colleges and opportunities. By working with these students — beginning in high school through college to their first job — QuestBridge aims to increase the percentage of talented low-income students attending the nation's best colleges and to support them to achieve success in their careers and communities.

We know...

The vast majority of high-achieving, low-income students do not apply to selective colleges or universities.

We believe...

The right information can change the way outstanding low-income students see their future.

Please take some time to watch a pre-recorded webinar on the program including Questbridge Scholars which opens in Spring of junior year to apply for summer programs. It is just under an hour.

The earlier students learn about Questbridge, the more time they have to develop their resume, research the partner colleges and rank schools that they may match to.

We provide opportunities...

To these exceptional students to help them understand that an education at a top college is possible— and affordable.

We've helped thousands of students...

Gain admission with full scholarships or generous financial aid to QuestBridge college partners.

NCAA ELIGIBILITY CENTER STUDENT ATHLETE TEXT MESSAGING

Eligibility Center begins texting program September 16

Starting the week of Sept. 16, the Eligibility Center will begin messaging prospective student-athletes via text with updates relating to their Eligibility Center accounts.

The text messaging program, which has been under development for more than a year, is designed to more effectively communicate information about the certification process to high school student-athletes seeking certification, as well as increase each student-athlete's rate of response to certification tasks. The program is also designed to decrease the number of emails sent from the Eligibility Center and minimize inquiries to the Customer Service team. During the certification season, which runs through summer to mid-September, an average of 250,000 prospective student-athletes come through the EC, seeking certification or information on certification. Of those, approximately 100,000 register with a certification account annually.

Each account can require a dozen or more direct contacts from the EC, usually via email, in order to assist each student in moving their certification process forward.

We are excited about this technical enhancement and look forward to expanding this service in the future. Thank you for all of your collaborative efforts on behalf of student-athletes!

#209: Paying the Price: College Costs, Financial Aid, and the Betrayal of the American Dream -

In this episode—one of my new favorites—I interview Dr. Sara Goldrick-Rab, Professor of Higher Education Policy & Sociology at Temple University, and author of Paying the Price: College Costs, Financial Aid, and the Betrayal of the American Dream. One of the coolest things about

Dr. Goldrick-Rab (besides the fact that she was on the Daily Show with Trevor Noah) is that she doesn't just understand the monumental challenges students face in paying for college, she also outlines really clear ideas to help move us toward better solutions. We cover:

- Why has paying for college become such a problem?
- Which students are most impacted by needs insecurity and why don't students tell their stories of struggle?
- How is the current financial aid system broken, and what are some solutions?
- How can students avoid getting into debt without getting a degree?
- Advice for students currently applying to college
- A really specific way that you, dear listener, can make a difference.

#210: The Being Not-Rich Guide - In this one I interview Lauren Schandavel, a 4th year Public Policy student at the University of Michigan and creator of the "Being Not-Rich" Guide, a super simple and practical resource that helps students navigate the costs of college. In the words of the Chronicle of Higher Education, the "Being Not-Rich" Guides grew out of two emerging themes on college campuses: "a political climate in which students take matters into their own hands, and a growing population of first-generation and low-income students on college campuses." If you like practical, you'll like this one. It also has tips for how students at other colleges can create their own Being Not-Rich Guide.

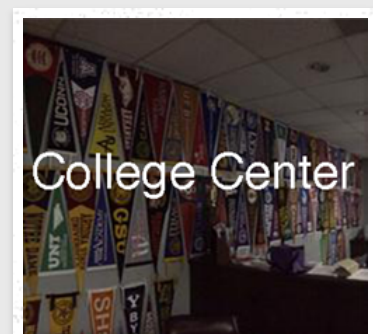

#211: Financial Aid Tips for International Students: Joan Liu is back! In this episode she draws on her years of experience helping international students navigate financial aid in order to attend college in the US. If you're an international student applying to schools in the US (or you work with them), this episode is a must-listen. We cover:

- How is the application process different for international students who need full financial aid?
- For counselors, how is working with a full-financial aid students different than other students?
- What are common mistakes students (and counselors) make in applying for financial aid?
- What do students need to know about getting full financial aid in the US?
- How do students figure out which schools meet full need?
- What can students and counselors do if a student doesn't get their need met?
- Where do students begin?

Happy listening
